

The Magician

Mason Jennings

Without warning my house became a magic show
The moon was the spotlight, I sat in the first row
There wasn't time for tears, one minute she was here
And I watched my darling, the magician disappear

I went through the hallways looking for a backstage door
There was no applause, no hope for an encore
And everything is so unclear, one minute she was here
And I watched my darling, the magician disappear

I opened the closet where all of her clothes had been
It was empty, the hangers were still swinging
And she wasn't behind the mirror, one minute she was here
And I watched my darling, the magician disappear

The last thing I heard was 'Abracadabra'
Last thing I heard was 'Abracadabra'
It kept a-ringin' in my ears, one minute she was here
And I watched my darling, the magician disappear
Yeah, I watched my darling, the magician disappear
